C. Read and answer.[21-22]*Totem Poles

Have you ever heard of a totem pole? A totem pole is a structure carved from a tree. Totem poles were created by native people from the northwestern part of North America.

The carvings on totem poles contain images of people, animals, and events. Originally, some people believed totem poles were religious symbols. However, this is a myth. Totem poles were not worshiped. They were mainly used to tell legends or to describe events. Totem poles also marked important families.

Because totem poles are tall, the images are on top of each other. Researchers have debated about which images are most important. Some believe images on the bottom of the poles are the least important. This has created the saying, "the lowest man on the totem pole." This means the least important person in a group is like the bottom image on a totem pole. However, other people believe the most important images are on the bottom.

Some totem poles can still be seen. Totem poles can still be found in places like Alaska. Maybe you will see a totem pole someday!

Census

Do you hear reports about the people in your country? Does the report talk about what types of people live in your country and how much they earn? How is this information discovered? Usually, it's gathered through a census.

A census is the process of gathering information from a @population. Most countries around the world use a census to help determine certain kinds of information. The census is a list of questions. Traditionally, people went from door to door, asking people the questions. Common questions include how much a person earns, how many children live in the house, and how people vote. Other questions include a person's age, gender, and nationality.

Census-taking has been around for thousands of years. One of the earliest censuses was taken in China, more than 4,000 years ago! In the United States, a census is taken every decade. The questions are used by the government to determine how people vote, how to set taxes, and other things. The information also helps the government discover who lives in the country, what they do, and what they like. Perhaps you will be asked to take a census soon!

D. Read and write.Cupid

Cupid is the Roman god of love. Cupid caused people to fall in love by shooting them with arrows. A person shot by one of Cupid's arrows would fall in love with the next person he or she saw.

Cupid was the son of Venus and Mars. Venus was beautiful. However, she was jealous of a beautiful human, Psyche. People began worshiping Psyche instead of Venus. Angered, Venus told Cupid to make Psyche fall in love with an ugly person. As Cupid was sneaking up on Psyche, he scratched himself with an arrow. This caused him to fall in love with Psyche.

Cupid visited Psyche during the night. This was so she could not see him. Psyche loved Cupid and was happy to obey him. However, Psyche's two sisters made her believe Cupid was a monster. One night, Psyche held a candle over Cupid's face while he slept. Cupid awoke. Angered, he left Psyche for disobeying him. Psyche searched for Cupid until the god Jupiter felt bad for her. He allowed Psyche to live forever so she could be with Cupid again.
