In ancient Greece, a wealthy man was going on a trip with twenty slaves.

(a) Sometime after the trip, the master decided to set his clever slave free. He was soon engaged by the king to fill the job of royal storyteller.

(b) They rushed forward to get the lightest bags. The smallest slave waited, and he was left with the heaviest bag of all. The others laughed, but he knew that his bag contained the food for the journey.

(c) As the group traveled, the small slave's bag became lighter and lighter, while the other slaves had to carry the same loads.

(d) The man told the slaves they could carry any bag they wanted, but they must keep the same bag for the whole trip.

The former slave's name was Aesop, and the stories were his now famous fables.

You've probably seen guide dogs navigate the streets with their blind owners, but what would you think if you saw a guide horse? Yes, a horse!

People are often surprised when they first see Panda guiding her owner, Ann Edie. Panda is a miniature horse—she's only as tall as Ann's thigh—and she knows how to help Ann go anywhere she wants to go. Panda sees for Ann, guiding her across busy streets, through crowded buildings, and even into cars or onto trains.

판다는 안내 동물로 훈련된 최초의 소형 말들 중 하나이다. Her training has been a learning experience for both Ann and Panda. The two use special signals to tell each other when to stop, when to go, or where there might be danger. Ann says, "Panda and I are partners and friends — and that is a wonderful feeling."
